Retail Sales And Revenue Overview For Bright coffee Shop

Overview

This dashboard provides the CEO with a clear view of how Bright Coffee Shop sales are performing. It tracks sales volume and revenue over time, highlights patterns by day of month and day of week, and compares performance across time of day buckets to pinpoint peak trading periods.

It also breaks results down by store location and product category to identify best sellers, top performing stores, and the spending mix by customer spend bucket surfacing the categories and locations that are driving both revenue and sales.

Overall Insights

- Daily revenue roughly doubled from 2.5 to 3k per day in January to 5 to 7k per day by June, showing a clear upward trend.
- Revenue growth accelerated in late April to May and continued into June, with larger day to day peaks and a higher baseline indicating a sustained uplift (likely seasonal or campaign driven).
- Despite periodic dips, the overall trajectory through June is positive, suggesting sustained improvement rather than a short lived spike.
- Sales are overwhelmingly low ticket 98.5% of transactions are in the Low Spend" bucket, with Medium and Other buckets contributing negligible share.
- Given the heavy skew to low ticket transactions, further revenue growth will depend on increasing transaction volume or shifting customers into higher spend buckets.
- Morning is the dominant time period for sales, generating roughly 11 to 12k across days about double afternoon and triple evening volumes.
- Tuesday and Friday show the highest morning sales (around 12k), while evenings are consistently the weakest period across all weekdays.
- Top category concentration: Coffee ($270k) and Tea ($196k) together drive the majority of revenue, far exceeding other categories.
- Bakery ($82k) and Drinking Chocolate ($72k) contribute meaningfully but much less than Coffee and Tea, remaining categories each fall under $41k, indicating revenue concentration in a few categories.
- Cumulative monthly sales show steady month to month growth with the largest incremental increases from April to June, and mornings contribute the largest cumulative share each month.
